Stewpot Update after Week Eight And The Beat Goes On

It seems impossible to believe we have been in sandwich mode at Stewpot for eight weeks but it's true. So far it has been a complete success.

What does Stewpot look like right now?

Volunteers continue to show up daily to make mountains of sandwiches. Right now we are at 6,000 lunches provided or 12,000 sandwiches, whichever you prefer. The volunteers who have not been able to come continue to offer financial and prayer support for the ones who are able to come serve. Please continue to let Jan, Charlie or Nancy know if your group is unable to show up. We have volunteers who are willing to show up on short notice if needed but we need to know.

Ed and his team have maintained a perfect attendance and performance rating. They have finished each lunch downstairs inside the courtyard and serve drinks to the diners as well. All done at a safe distance, they keep in touch with our old and new diners. They continue to monitor the First Presbyterian grounds for trash. When you are able to come to Stewpot you'll notice how incredibly clean it is. From bathrooms, to storeroom to floors, things are spotless.

We have also streamlined our contribution process by making PayPal and PlumFund giving available to everyone. Every dollar is appreciated and well spent. Our numbers have continued to increase and that is going to be a trend.

Because a picture is worth a thousand words, we have made a video to help everyone see for yourselves all the amazing work that goes on. Thanks to Jared Brown from Trinity Presbyterian Church for filming and editing this creation.

We have no plans to change our method of preparation and service in the next few weeks. Our diners are happy. Our volunteers and employees are safe and distancing. Our program is able to go forward. Why mess with success?
